Subject: She was veeeeery hungry ...

Greetings [FIRSTNAME],

It's Faith again from [COMPANYNAME.COM], and I'm smiling from ear to ear at this one ...

I was thinking about a movie I saw years ago involving kids and how they adapt to the world.

My favorite story featured 7-year-old Sylvie. She was smart ... adorable ... and strong-willed.

When her parents invited her out to lunch, Sylvie couldn't wait to go.

She grabbed her raggedy elephant purse. Her parents, horrified at the sight, said "No!" ... but Sylvie wouldn't budge. (How could she leave her little elephant behind?)

Alone, Sylvie took charge and quickly adapted to her new situation.

She dug out her father's bullhorn. Her small arms wobbled as she lifted it up. She walked to the window. Took a deep breath.

Through a bullhorn almost as big as her, Sylvie announced from her fourth-floor window that her parents had abandoned her ...

And that she was very, veeeeery hungry!

Alarmed, her neighbors rigged up a pulley and lifted a basket filled with home-cooked food up to Sylvie's apartment window. Her hunger was satisfied.

Sylvie's story is about adapting to her current environment and getting exactly what she wanted. It reminded me a lot about something else ...

A story about a green home that has adapted to its environment ... and will give you exactly what you want.

This home's an innovative trailblazer (not to mention adorably enchanting, just like Sylvie).

And there's one more thing. If you remember, Sylvie's meal was pretty friendly to her wallet.

Well, this house will be veeeeery friendly to yours!

Green. Captivating. Adaptive. Affordable. Wouldn't you like a home like this?
